

While it is still somewhat early in the vacation season for the managers to have definite plans for next year, an outline of general plans and prospects will be interesting to theatre-goers. Mr. Mulvey of the Grand has just returned from New York, where he left an office busily engaged in making bookings for the coming season. The date of opening and the first attraction, Mr. Mulvey is as yet unable to state. The class of attractions will be along the same lines as last year, with a marked advance in quality all through. A year's experience has been of great value and Mr. Mulvey has made arrangements whereby only the best of the popular attractions will come to his house.

At the Salt Lake theatre, Mr. Pyper is busily engaged getting things into shape for next year, and already has some notion of what the season will bring to his patrons. "The Theatre" will open on Sept. 15, with Clay Clement, who is a great favorite in Salt Lake. He will be seen in his new play entitled "A Southern Gentleman," and also in "The New Dominion," which first brought him fame in this part of the country.

"Why Smith Left Home," the successful farce comedy which was taken to London this season, will also visit Salt Lake. The road company of "The Christian" will come here, and the company which has made a great success this season in Salt Lake, "The Bride Elect." A whole week has been booked for Benjamin Thompson in "The Old Homestead." Among the regular yearly visitors will be the Bostonians, Willie Colver, and West's minstrel, and one of the big attractions will be that delightful and favorite comedian, Sol Smith Russell.

There is an interesting rumor to the effect that Sir Henry Irving will go to San Francisco when he visits this country next season, and if so, he will be seen in a new play, "The Merchant of Venice," which has made this far side of the Atlantic, and from now until September the list will be greatly increased, with no doubt, a most important attraction. Mr. Pyper looks forward to a most auspicious season, from the play-goers' standpoint, as well as the managerial.

A strong effort will also be made to bring the best musical attractions in the country to the Salt Lake theatre—an ambition which is certainly backed by public inclination. Many excellent concerts, such as some we have had during the past year, would do very well to come to the theatre. In the somewhat time-worn discussion of the subject, we have frequently heard that high-class concerts "do not pay" at the theatre. With the opportunity, and proper handling, it will be proven that they do not. Mr. Pyper has looked forward to a most auspicious season, from the play-goers' standpoint, as well as the managerial.

The New York papers which have just come to hand are full of criticisms and reviews of Sarah Bernhardt's "Hamlet," which has been produced in London. Clement Scott, the eminent critic, late of the London Telegraph, and now special correspondent of the New York Herald, criticized the whole performance, and said that the only "Hamlet" to be compared with Bernhardt's was that of Charles Fechter, who has been awarded the palm heretofore. "A French temperament," says Mr. Scott, "is necessary to the portrayal of the part," and he is therefore pleased with the new touches which the divine Sarah gives to the character. He says that the whole performance passed like a delightful dream. On the other hand, Alan Dale of the New York Journal, now in London, in his light and flippant style, tells another story. He says: "If Sarah crowns herself again—and there is no knowing what she will do—there will be no 'Hamlet' laurel in her coronet." He calls her venture "poor French nerve," and also ridicules the French translation of the drama, while his confrere, Scott, says "with the French version of the immortal text, I was charmed. It conveyed Shakespeare's idea in a nutshell. Nothing was omitted that was absolutely essential, much was supplied that we often forget in our acting editions." It is hard to know what to believe, yet it seems a natural tendency to ridicule "Hamlet" in a petulant "Hamlet" review. The version he called "Hamlet" or "Hamletine," for he says that it contains one sixteenth of "Hamlet" and fifteen-sixteenths of Sarah. A little irony of design is that Mrs. Bernhardt is going to take the play to Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's birthplace, before she returns to France. She herself regards "Hamlet" as the greatest triumph of her career, and there is a dim possibility that America will see the performance.

Augustus Thomas' new play entitled "Arizona" was produced in Chicago a couple of weeks ago and was an immense success. An interesting episode of the rehearsal was related by Mr. Thomas in his first-night speech before the curtain. Says "Biff" Hall in the "Arizona Mirror": "In this play of 'Arizona,' said Mr. Thomas, 'we were obliged to have someone who looked like a soldier, and at rehearsal I picked out a man who seemed stalwart and intelligent, and asked him if he had ever served in the militia.' He replied that he had not. Then I asked him if he had seen men march and drill, and he replied that he had. When I asked him where, he said: 'On the way to Cuba.'"

Sherlock Holmes Dramatized.
The play of "Sherlock Holmes," in which Dr. Conan Doyle and Mr. Gillette have collaborated, is remotely founded, according to the London Mail, upon the two stories called "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Final Problem," the woman, Irene Adler, and Professor Moriarty playing prominent parts. Towards the end "Holmes" is compelled to brave the most certain death, which awaits him as Moriarty's hand, by venturing single-handed in one of the loneliest and eeriest haunts of the gang, among the ruffians whom he is bent upon exterminating. This scene in the East End, leads to the dramatic and sensational climax of the play, but glimpses are afforded, also, of the mysterious headquarters of Moriarty, in a decayed mansion in one of the best squares in Bloomsbury, and one of the bachelor rooms in Baker street, in which the redoubtable Sherlock smoked his pipe, played his violin, and thought out the explanations of the most unfathomable crimes which horrified and bewildered the world. Beyond the atmosphere of mystery, however, there is nothing in the play which is not original; and so with the whole set of characters, with the exception of the two central and equally important figures, and that of Holmes' inevitable confidant, Dr. Watson.

Actresses' Salaries.
Having established herself pre-eminently as our chief player in petticoats, what is Zara Carter worth in the way of salary? asks Hillary Bell in the New York Press. No one knows what her arrangements are with David Belasco. In the suit against Fairbanks her teacher said he gave Mrs. Carter a salary of $4 a week. Times have changed since then, and the actress' value with them. Before the production of the present drama a syndicate offered her $1,000 a week, and "Zara" has declared her worth much more indisputably than "The Heart." If Mrs. Carter was rated in December as $1,000 a week she should demand a higher salary after playing to standing room for nearly six months. Ada Bohan's salary was $200 a week, yet she never made such a run as has been achieved by Zara Carter. Lillian Russell received $1,200 a week from Abbey Schofield & Grau, and her engagement was a failure. Abbey's contract with Sarah Bernhardt gave her $1,500 a week. Elmore Dues, who assumes the risk of her own management, is supposed to have an average income of about $1,000 a week. In his season now ended, Richard Mansfield's personal earnings from "Cyrano de Bergerac" amounted to almost $2,000 a week. Three sea-

TO RELIEVE ALASKA MINERS

THE GOVERNMENT EXPEDITION STARTS OUT WITH BATIONS.

Will Hunt Up the Destitute and Suffering Prospectors in the Cook's Inlet Country.

Washington, July 1.—Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn has received a report from Captain Edwin F. Glenn, Twenty-fifth infantry, commanding the Cook Inlet expedition, dated Tynookook, Alaska, June 5, 1899, in which he states that on June 4 he started a detachment consisting of seven men to Knik station, properly supplied and equipped with rations to Oct. 31 next.

The instructions delivered to the men were to proceed to Eagle City by the valley of the Madanaska river. They were to proceed through such passes of the Alaskan range of mountains as might prove most practicable, and in case no one was found west of Meiklejohn pass, they were to go through it. This pass, Captain Glenn thinks, can be easily reached from the trail followed by himself during the season of 1898.

It is further stated by Captain Glenn that the past winter was a very mild one, the lowest temperature reported at Knik station being 33 degrees below zero, yet the spring has been late.

In compliance with instructions given last fall, Sergeant Yanert, in charge of Knik station, surveyed and staked out a military reservation one mile square, upon which buildings were erected and provision made for stock and provisions.

Captain Glenn states that he has constructed at Tynookook a storehouse twenty by twenty-two feet, to accommodate the stores of the command and protect them from the rain and snow. He has also gotten out the logs for a building twenty by twenty-six feet, for quarters and further storage.

In view of the foregoing facts, Captain Glenn recommends that such animals as may be brought back safely from the interior be left at Tynookook and Knik inlet, with the smallest number of men necessary to take proper care of them and the stores.

Captain Glenn requests instructions as to the disposition of the steamer Duchesnay in case she is used in navigating the Sushitna and Tonto rivers with safety. It is thought that she can be safely put upon temporary duty constructed at Tynookook, and will require only the services of a watchman from the detachment at the present camp. The Duchesnay, Captain Glenn states, has just returned from the Knik arm, having made the distance, 140 miles, in eleven hours, besides unloading her cargo within that time. This was done, he says, under little steam or at little more than half speed, and Captain Glenn proceeded at once to load her for her first trip up the Sushitna.

Captain Glenn further states that Sergeant William Yanert, who is a veteran in Alaskan exploration and who was in charge of the expedition, is perfectly adapted for present day use. This is a very good thing to know. He speaks of the maps in the Century Dictionary and Cyclopaedia in terms of the highest possible praise. He refers particularly to the maps of central Africa, a country with which he is probably better acquainted than any other living man. If for no other reason than to see the unstinted praise that he bestows upon American workmanship the letter should be read by everyone. It appears that the best European map-makers were the best; but now America is leaving Europe behind. In maps as well as in steel rails and locomotives, America now leads. The Century is the great publication that the Times-Herald is placing among the readers of The Salt Lake Herald on very advantageous terms.
